Artists who champion good causes

BenZhen Sung is a Chinese-American illustrator from Los Angeles, California. After studying concept art at the Feng Zhu School of Design in Singapore, she pivoted to illustration and character design for children's books and animation.

She loves drawing people and is constantly inspired by the lived experiences of those she encounters - in books, in the news, in real life. Her designs are usually grounded in a specific time and culture, but she seeks to convey the universal, depicting themes like wonder, friendship, courage, and sacrifice, which people everywhere can relate to.

Artists who champion good causes. We work with major progressive brands to communicate their message and align our mutual values by connecting them with diverse, genuine and individual talent.
