Artists who champion good causes

Cheyne Gallarde (he/him/his) is a queer artist who was born and raised in Hawaii, but now lives in San Francisco. Cheyne's art reimagines drag queens and queer people as modern-day superheroes plucked straight out of the vintage comic books he grew up on. In 2019, he won a National Advertising Award for his illustrations of LGBTQ icons like Marsha P Johnson and Harvey Milk, created for LOGOTV. In 2020, his cover art for Penguin Books' queer-centric "Legendary Children" was released to much praise. Cheyne loves working with clients like True Religion, Johnson & Johnson, and Netflix who allow him to showcase queer people in a proud and positive light. When not drawing or painting, Cheyne loves to unwind with video games, binge-watch trashy reality TV & take blurry pics of his rescue dog Rocket.

Artists who champion good causes. We work with major progressive brands to communicate their message and align our mutual values by connecting them with diverse, genuine and individual talent.
