Individual Diverse Global Distinct
Artists who champion good causes

Veronica Johnson is an illustrator from Montclair, New Jersey, who has turned her love of the small-town Americana aesthetic and pulp detective novels into a lucrative illustration career. Works in primarily digital mediums to provide a glimpse of the past using tools of the present, very much inspired by golden age comic book artists such as Matt Baker, Reed Crandall, and Alexander Raymond, and various mid-century designs and advertisements. As a transgender woman, she has done several projects involving LGBTQ history and wants her work to be a reflection of the past rooted in a modern perspective. She graduated with a Bachelor of Fine Arts from Montclair State University in 2019, and has worked with a number of independent fashion brands, advertising agencies, musicians, and social media influencers.

Artists who champion good causes. We work with major progressive brands to communicate their message and align our mutual values by connecting them with diverse, genuine and individual talent.
